SPEAKER PROFILE

PATRICIA LEBLANC-BIRD

Bridging Law and Society

Patricia LeBlanc-Bird is a seasoned legal practitioner with an illustrious career spanning nearly four decades. She embarked on her legal journey in 1983 when she was called to the New Brunswick bar and has been an integral associate of her firm since 1990. Patricia's legal acumen is grounded in a rich educational background. She is a proud graduate of the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton, where she earned her Bachelor of Arts degree in 1980, majoring in Political Science. Following this, she achieved her Bachelor of Laws degree in 1982.

Patricia's passion for law extends beyond her legal practice. She has served as a lecturer for the Business Law class at Crandall University, where she imparted her legal insights to aspiring students. Her ability to bridge the gap between academic theory and real-world legal practice makes her a compelling and effective educator.

With extensive experience in personal injury and insurance claims, Patricia's preferred areas of practice encompass estate planning matters, real estate transactions, and family law issues. She is not only a practitioner of family law but a proponent of the collaborative law movement, holding certification as a collaborative family law practitioner.

In addition to her academic contributions, Patricia has been a valuable resource for the community, providing seminars to various community groups and business organizations. Her topics of discussion cover current and relevant legal issues, helping individuals and organizations navigate complex legal landscapes with clarity and confidence.

Beyond her legal commitments, Patricia is a member of the Christian Legal Fellowship, a past President of Greater Moncton United Way, and a past Committee Chairperson with the Moncton Business and Professional Women's Club. She also actively contributes to the Greater Moncton YMCA and has played a pivotal role in the Moncton YMCA Building Campaign Committee.

She is an active member of numerous legal associations, including the Moncton Area Lawyers Association, the Law Society of New Brunswick, and the Canadian Bar Association. Additionally, she was appointed as a Commissioner on the New Brunswick Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities in 2004.

With a rich tapestry of legal experience, a gift for public speaking, and a deep commitment to her community, Patricia LeBlanc-Bird is a speaker who brings expertise and passion to every engagement. Her ability to bridge the gap between complex legal issues and the general public makes her an invaluable resource for audiences seeking clarity in the legal landscape. Her wealth of experience, combined with her dedication to sharing knowledge and serving her community, makes her a remarkable asset to any speaking engagement or legal discussion.
